

ABSTRACT

as
An apparatus for supplying breathable gas includes a relatively rigid external housing, at least one noise producing component internal of the housing, and a thin flexible enclosure substantially sealed around the noise producing component. A method of assembling the apparatus comprises assembling the noise producing components into a sub-assembly, placing the sub-assembly into the interior of the thin flexible enclosure through an opening therein, and placing the flexible enclosure within the external housing.